On the Way to the Pyramids On the western bank of the Nile stretches a tract of land about 25 miles long, on the edge of the Libyan Desert, and here stand the great burial-places, the Pyramids. This picture shows the Pyramids of Gizeh flushed with the celestial roses of an African sunset.

Pasturing near the Pyramids. Sheep were known in Egypt at an early period, but were not indigenous to it. Flocks of them snatched a hard and scanty living from the coarse grasses that grow upon the parched plateau of the Pyramids, but they have, like Cassio, "a lean and hungry look."
